It all started when 16-year-old Beatrice Wong read a news report about the lack of (16) disposable masks early in 2020. The Secondary 4 student immediately thought about vulnerable groups who would have difficulty affording masks, and quickly got to work.

(17)
Together with her brother, Adriel, 12, and their mother, the Wong family has sewn and donated over 300 reusable masks. This is no mean feat in the short time.

Unlock Your True Potential at Resilience Secondary School!

Resilience Secondary School (RSS) was founded in 1885 by Mr Howard Eng, a successful businessman who overcame many challenges in life with perseverance. With a deep conviction that every child should have a fair chance at education which prepared them for life, he aspired to build a vibrant school ahead of its times to nurture students and give back to the community. This vision has been the school's guiding philosophy, even till today. Join the RSS family to unlock your true potential!

Expanding Minds through Academics

- Exposure to a wide range of contexts and situations to apply knowledge and skills
- Emphasis on deep understanding instead of rote learning for greater transference of learning
- Extension of core curriculum with electives such as Theatre Studies, Digital Design, Sports Science and Culinary Arts
- Encouragement of innovation and student-led projects

Lifting Spirits with Activities

- Focus on providing time and opportunities for discovering talents and interests
- Forging of close bonds through clubs and societies
- Facilitation of character development through activities in multiple domains (e.g. competitive and recreational sports, performing arts, student-initiated interest groups)

Getting to the Heart of Service

- Development of compassion and empathy through community service and environmental activism
- Dedication of service through pre- and post-service briefings, workshops, preparatory sessions, regular reflections and student ambassadors' forums

Resilience Secondary School welcomes you to our ANNUAL OPEN HOUSE!

Come and experience the RSS environment and culture.
Take the opportunity to speak with the school leaders and let them share their vision for the future of RSS with you.

With her small stature, Ms Chelsea Ann Sim does not strike many as a taekwondo exponent at first glance. The 1.5m-tall athlete also has two heart conditions that leave her breathless at times and put her at risk _____ heart failure.

However, she has been in the sport for more than ten years now, and she has proven herself in the field, with at least four medals from major regional competitions – much _____ her surprise.

Born with a hole in her heart, Ms Sim was never _____ sports as a child as she would get breathless if she overexerted herself. Her worried parents took many precautions with her and she was exempted _____ the National Physical Fitness Award tests in school.

Things changed _____ she turned eleven as her older sister insisted that she take taekwondo lessons at a nearby community centre. After she started, her love _____ the sport grew. She was selected to be part of the national team when she was 14 years old.

(34)

Ms Sim was diagnosed _____ her second heart condition while she was training for the 2015 SEA Games in Singapore. However, _____ did not crush her spirit as she bettered her results at the Games, earning a gold medal in the same category.

(35)

Looking back, Ms Sim said she would not have made it _____ the help from her family, coaches and friends in taekwondo. "I didn't do it alone. I am very lucky to have had a very extensive support system – from my family to the Singapore Taekwondo Federation and my coaches. They've seen me grow _____ the years and groomed me to be who I am today," she said. She hopes that her story will inspire others in similar situations to persevere.

Each of the underlined words contains a spelling or grammatical error. Write the correct word in each of the boxes. (12 marks)

The chatter in our classrooms and canteens has been replaced by the uneasiness we experiencing inside our socially-distanced bubbles. Social-distancing sometimes makes a rare, extended conversation with a friend feel like the day's crowning achievement.

(40)

(41)

During a crisis, take the time to be kind and appreshēative is vital to dampen loneliness and promote generocity. Perhaps we can write a card to a friend or voluntear to do a household chore. We will probably also notese that, even with the masks, we can see the smiles on the eyes of others. Therefore, it is important to continue smiling.

(42)

(44)

(45)

(46)

Besides an act of gratitude is meant for the reseepient, it actually benefits the giver too. When people around you feel seen and acknowledged, they return the favour, invest more in their efforts, and form stronger connections. This are all essential ingredients to offset the stress of a crisis. Giving thanks can be infactious. Even when we are uncertain about the present and future, we can control our action. We can choose to help multiply gratitude.

(49)

Fill in each blank with a suitable word.

Initially, Helen still did not _____ (56) that the hand signs had meaning. One day, Annie put Helen's hand into water coming from a pump. Then, she spelt out water into Helen's other _____ (57). Annie taught Helen patiently. Finally, something clicked. Helen understood what Annie was doing. An entire new world opened up for Helen. Annie's patience towards Helen was worthwhile. Helen learned a number of new words that day. In many ways, it was one of the happiest days of her _____ (58).

Soon, Helen could _____ (59) entire books in Braille, a special reading system where the letters are made out of little bumps on a page. It is truly an amazing accomplishment that Helen learnt to read _____ (60) she could not see or hear.

As Helen _____ (61) older, she wanted to help other people like herself. She wanted to inspire them and _____ (62) them hope. She joined the American Foundation for the Blind and travelled across the _____ (63) giving speeches to her fellow citizens. During World War II, she visited the wounded army soldiers _____ (64) encouraged them not to give up. At Piedmont School, everyone wanted to be on the soccer team. Laura had dreamed of earning glory for the Falcons ever since she had witnessed her older brother scoring the winning goal. On the day she joined the team, she felt like she could fly.

Unfortunately, her joy did not last. She spent most of the matches on the bench. Walking to the car after the last game, Laura's mother asked if she was feeling fine. Laura kept quiet and tried to smile at her mother. Having spent yet another game as a reserve, Laura had not even broken a sweat. Laura also joked that she would have baked under the hot sun if she had played. Her mother assured her that she would have another chance to play. She also cheered Laura on. Laura could only shake her head as she climbed into the seat, back hunched and face down.

A few days later, Laura's mother found her sprawled on the couch, watching music videos on her phone, and tried asking Laura to watch soccer videos instead. Laura looked at her mother blankly, rolling her eyes. "They won't help me and I can't get better by myself," Laura added.

Sighing, her mother sank down on the couch. "Laura, for every lock, there is a key. We just have to find it. What if I filmed you practising to help you find ways to improve?"

"But the season's over, Mum. No more practice, remember?" Laura said. Her mother looked at her resolutely and insisted that the best players keep practising even when the season is over. Laura protested, "But to practise plays, I would need at least one other person to join me! It is difficult to do that alone."

Laura's mother patted her and said, "We'll find that key too, but we have to start somewhere." While Laura's mother was searching her wallet for her gold key, she smiled gently at Laura. She gave Laura an assuring nod before passing her the key. "This key is a reminder for you to be strong and not give up. Let's build something tomorrow," Laura's mother said.

The next day, Laura and her mother built a rickety goal with scrap wood and duct tape. It looked like she could knock it over by sneezing, but she made do with it. A routine was developed. Every night before dinner, they headed to an old car garage for one hour, where Laura practised dribbling by dodging around old tyres, pretending she was protecting the ball from the best players in the world. Her mother recorded everything secretly behind a pillar.

At first, when Laura's mother showed her the videos, she doubled over in laughter. However, Laura began to be able to see her mistakes. It helped her, but insufficiently. As time passed, she struggled to correct what she watched, and there were no teammates around to help her. Like a pot of water on the stovetop, Laura's frustration bubbled hotter and hotter.

One evening, a boy from Laura's school and some other children from the neighbourhood saw Laura going about her routine and asked her what she was doing. Laura hesitated, "Um...I'm perfecting my dribble against imaginary defenders... I don't suppose... any of you would want to practise with me?" Dequan replied that he would, but he could not run fast enough.

Laura beamed and exclaimed, "Oh I finally understand what my mother did for me! I used to be so slow but my mum taught me how to get faster by strengthening my leg muscles. I can teach you if you want!"

Dequan chirped, "Awesome! I have a net we can use, too!" Soon, more of the other children agreed to join in.

Laura spun around and saw her mother winking at her. Laura pumped her fist in the air. "See, Laura? You are like the key now," Laura's mother said.

"I will continue my passion even if I do not ever get to play in the matches," Laura replied with a smile.
